Memorial Day: A time for remembering

Two boys reflect on the cross and flag that mark the grave of their grandfather in the Orem City Cemetery. Some historians claim that Memorial Day observances began more than 120 years ago in remembrance of the those who gave their lives in the Civil War. But it has only been since 1971 that the last Monday in May has been set aside as the legal holiday. See story on page 6.

Missionary stabbed in Ireland

By JILL BARTHOLOMEW
Universe Staff Writer

A Payson man serving as a missionary for The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints in Ireland was killed Sunday evening.

Elder Gale Stanley Critchfield, 20, was stabbed in the chest on his doorstep after attending a fireside, said President William P. Martin of the Ireland Dublin Mission.

Elder Critchfield, son of Mr. and Mrs. Gale Edward Critchfield, was pronounced dead on arrival at the local hospital, Martin said.

Elder Critchfield's bishop, Joseph B. Liddle of the Payson 13th Ward, said that after riding a bus to their apartment in Clondalkin, a city just outside of Dublin, Elder Critchfield and his comppanion walked to a member home because a "group of hoodlums" was loitering at the bus stop.

On their way back to their apartment, the elders passed the bus stop again and tried to avoid the group, Liddle said. One of the people in the group followed the elders to the apartment where he stabbed Elder Critchfield on the porch, he said.

Elder Critchfield's companion was not touched, Liddle said.

LDS Church spokesman Don LeFevre said the motive for the stabbing is not yet known.

Martin said, Critchfield was one of 160 LDS missionaries laboring in Ireland, and one of 42,000 LDS missionaries worldwide.

"Elder Critchfield, who had been on his mission for 14 months, was an excellent missionary," Martin said.

"He was liked by everyone who worked with him," he said, "and had a great respect for the people (of Ireland)."

He was working in a new area, and he already had two people committed to baptism, Martin said.

Liddle described Elder Critchfield as a "good kid" who loved sports and got along with everyone. The missionary was fourth in a family of eight children.

"He went by (his middle name), 'Stanley,'" Liddle said.

The family of Elder Critchfield is doing as well as can be expected, said Liddle. "His mother is taking it hard," he said.

Before beginning his missionary service, Elder Critchfield had attended Snow College in Ephraim, Liddle said.

Supreme Court's ruling causes more tax debate

By LOIS DECKER
Universe Staff Writer

The Supreme Court's May 21 ruling on tax deductibility for contributions to missionaries of The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints has resulted in conflicting interpretations.

Bruce L. Olsen, managing director of public affairs for the LDS Church, said the Church is "now implementing procedures that will preserve the income tax deductibility of contributions for support of missionaries."

Assistant U.S. Attorney General Shirley D. Peterson, who represented the Internal Revenue Service in the case, said future contributions to missionaries from parents must be delivered to the LDS Church if parents expect to receive a tax deduction.

"The question," said Peterson, "is who ultimately must receive the funds." She said the LDS Church must be the benefactor.

Alex Zazow, from the IRS, agreed with Peterson. "Funds from parents to children are definitely not allowable" as charitable contributions, he said.

"What it comes down to is the money must go from parent to church and then church to missionary. Anything less is not acceptable," Zazow said.

However, BYU President Rex E. Lee said under the Supreme Court's ruling the LDS Church may have several options.

"As I read the decision, it seems quite clear to me that there are several approaches, including a trust approach ... which would result in the contributions being deductible," President Lee said.

Support for his interpretation is discussed on Page 13 of the Supreme Court's Writ of Certiorari for the Davis case, said President Lee. Justice Sandra Day O'Connor wrote that taxpayers may "deduct contributions made to trusts, foundations, and similar donees.... A defining characteristic of a trust arrangement is that the beneficiary has the legal power to enforce the trustee's duty to comply with the terms of the trust."

The people creating the trust would be the parents, with the missionary as the trustee and the LDS Church as the beneficiary, Robert E. Riggs, law professor at BYU, said. "It's a matter of legal control," With such a trust, the LDS Church needs to control the trustee's finances, he said.

Don LeFevre, a spokesman for the LDS Church, said until the Church has completely studied the ruling, its members should continue to use the procedures for missionary donations recommended in the early 1980s.

In Moscow it's no passport, no service

Associated Press

MOSCOW — Cashiers shouted "Passports!" at crowds of testy shoppers on Monday, the first day of new sales that barred non-Muscovites from the capital's besieged stores.

Tempers flared over the rules, which were intended to curb a wave of panic-buying that started after the government announced Thursday it was raising prices as part of a transition to a market economy.

Shouting matches erupted between cashiers and shoppers who did not know about the rules. Long lines moved slowly as the internal passports were scrutinized for the stamp that proved residency.

"Passports, citizens, passports!" demanded a cashier at food store No. 14. "Moscow or Moscow region only!" She refused to take the money of people who had forgotten their documents, but softened her stance to an elderly man who said he was a veteran of World War II.

At supermarket No. 30 on Gorky Street, about 70 people jammed the front door after the lunch break. Three policemen waved truncheons to clear a narrow path so shoppers could exit once they had their purchases. The police hit no one with their truncheons.

"I quite agree with the passport measures!" said Valentina Guskova, a 67-year-old pensioner from the Moscow region who was shopping in a bread store on Gorky Street. "Those people from other regions, they used to flock to Moscow and strip shop shelves bare. Today, I can at least buy something for my grandchildren here."

Bush prepares for talks

Associated Press

KENNEBUNKPORT, Maine — President Bush said Monday that Mikhail S. Gorbachev is "pretty darn strong" despite economic woes plaguing the Soviet Union. But Bush virtually closed the door on giving Moscow trade benefits during summit talks this week.

"I go to the summit with open arms to welcome the president of the Soviet Union," Bush said, winding up four days of vacation to return to Washington for talks beginning Thursday.

In this seaside resort where he has spent nearly every summer of his life, Bush was the star attraction at the Memorial Day parade of veterans, school bands and fire trucks through Dock Square.

Basking in sunshine and surrounded by his wife, children and grandchildren, Bush called it a "little piece of Americana." Some people in the crowd of several thousand people flinched when a military honor guard unexpectedly fired a loud rifle salute near the president.

Bush told the crowd that as he meets with Gorbachev, openings have changed dramatically. There's no question that we have a better chance now for a lasting world peace.

But there are still some enormous problems out there," he said. "And this country must remain strong."

Bush has made an effort in the days before the summit to emphasize that Gorbachev — despite his problems — is a powerful world leader who has the authority to make deals with the United States. Administration officials reason that even if Gorbachev is replaced, his successors would be bound by any agreements he signs.

Gorbachev went on Soviet television Sunday night to appeal to his countrymen for calm in the face of panic buying triggered by Moscow's plans to double the prices of food and other goods.

"I think we spend too much time trying to figure out how long a leader in any country will be there," Bush said, answering reporters' questions at a country club as he teed off for a final round of golf.

"I mean, this man has survived," Bush said. "I've given him ... appropriate credit for the dramatic changes in Eastern Europe, conducting himself in a manner that none of us would have predicted possible two years ago."

Sharp differences over German unity and Soviet coercion of Lithuania threaten to put a cloud over the summit.

A major Soviet goal for the summit had been to win most-favored-nation trade status with the United States, giving Moscow the lowest possible tariffs on its exports to the United States.

A BYU professor of ancient scripture will speak on "Believing Christ" at the Devotional assembly today at 11 a.m. in the deJong Concert Hall, HFAC. "Often people believe the identity of who He is, but they don't believe in his power. They need to understand what authority is there and what it can do for them," said Stephen E. Robinson.

Robinson, director of Pearl of Great Price Research in the Religious Studies Center, graduated from BYU in 1971 with a degree in English. Robinson is nearing completion of his book "Are Mormons Christians?" The book will explain how the world perceives members of the LDS Church.

Israeli killed in bombing

Associated Press

JERUSALEM — A pipe bomb exploded Monday in a market filled with people shopping for the Jewish holiday of Shavuot, killing an elderly Israeli man. Israelis chanting "Death to Arabs!" tried to attack Palestinians held for questioning.

The noon explosion injured nine people at the packed Mahane Yehuda market.

A top aide to Prime Minister Yitzhak Shamir blamed the Palestine Liberation Organization and said the attack was timed to coincide with the Arab summit in Baghdad, Iraq, which opened Monday.

"The PLO is sending a message to the Arab summit in order to dramatize its call for Arab support for the Palestinian uprising and to show that it still has teeth," Yossi Ben-Aharon, director general of Shamir's office, told The Associated Press.

In Damascus, a Syrian-backed Palestinian group headed by Col. Said Mousa issued a communique claiming one of its fighters planted the bomb. Mousa is an enemy of PLO leader Yasser Arafat and cooperated with Syria in driving him out of Lebanon in 1985.

The communique from the Fagah-Uprising faction said the bomb was aimed at Jewish settlers in Jerusalem.

Police rounded up 87 Palestinians after the explosion. Just outside the market about 200 angry shoppers surrounded police vans as officers pushed the Palestinian detainees inside.

Dozens of onlookers tried to attack some of the Palestinians, shouting "Death to the Arabs!" and "Burn them, burn them!" At one point, a crowd of about 25 Israelis beat on a police van carrying an Arab detainee. Some Israeli stall owners sheltered Israeli soldiers move in to disperse Palestinian demonstrators in Jerusalem on May 23. An Israeli's killing of seven Palestinians last week sparked riots in Israel and the occupied territories.

Arab workers from the wrath of the crowd, and police stepped up patrols to prevent reprisals against Arabs.

Journalists also were attacked by angry Israelis.

Photographer Yoav Lemer, who was taking pictures for The Associated Press, was hospitalized after three men knocked him to the ground and kicked him. Two followers of the anti-Arab Kach movement of U.S.-

born Rabbi Meir Kahane were arrested in the attack.

The pipe bomb was hidden in a bag inside a garbage can. Officials said Shimon Cohen, 72, suffered internal injuries and died in Shaarei Zedek Hospital several hours after the blast.

Three other victims were reported to be in moderate condition, while the rest suffered slight wounds.

Con artists pose as census workers

WASHINGTON — An 80-year-old North Carolina woman was tied up and robbed by two men she thought were census workers. Con artists claiming to be census employees charged Houston residents $50 after helping them complete their forms.

"Anytime you have something this big, the scam artists are going to come out of the woodwork," said Larry Bryant of the census' regional office in Los Angeles.

There are 200,000 to 230,000 official census enumerators combing the countryside, knocking on doors of those people who failed to complete the form sent this spring, said agency spokesman Mark Mangold.

In an effort to cut back on such crime, the agency provides each worker with a red, white and blue badge identifying the holder by name and I.D. number as a "U.S. Census Enumerator," and a large black satchel with a red, white and blue patch that says "U.S. Census 1990."

In the North Carolina case, the woman initially allowed only one man into her home and was having a "nice conversation" with him when the doorbell rang and the man told her it was his partner, said Tom Smith Jr. of the Charlotte, N.C., office.

"They tied her up and commenced taking some valuable things from the house as well as her car," Smith said, adding that she was not physically injured.

Arab League conference opens in Iraq

BAGHDAD, Iraq — President Saddam Hussein, opening a two-day Arab League summit, said Monday that if Israel deployed nuclear or chemical weapons against Arabs, Iraq would respond with "weapons of mass destruction."

Also speaking to the 15 kings, sheiks and presidents, Jordan's King Hussein urged Arabs to use their oil wealth to influence world politics.

The conference was called as a show of Arab unity against what Saddam has said is a Western and Israeli campaign against Iraq. The summit will also seek ways to stem the large-scale emigration of Soviet Jews to Israel.

"The potentials of any Arab nation have to be in the service of all Arabs to safeguard national security," Saddam said.

"Should Israel strike, we shall strike back firmly. Should it use weapons of mass destruction, we shall use all the weapons of mass destruction that are in our possession."

"We'll never give up Palestine," he added to loud applause.

Doubled gas tax tops California ballot

SACRAMENTO, Calif. — Voters in the tax-revolt state are being asked to double gasoline taxes to keep highway traffic moving.

California voters face June 5 ballot topics ranging from mountain lion hunting to legislative ethics; topping the list is the gas tax hike aimed at raising $18.5 billion. Proposition 111 would double the 9-cents-a-gallon tax on fuel over five years to finance the largest transportation investment in state history. The $18.5 billion would pay for new highway and railway construction aimed at thwarting freeway grid lock.

Also on the ballot:

— a proposal to rewrite ethics guidelines for the Legislature, which has been rocked by a federal corruption probe. Critics call it a lawmakers' pay raise in disguise.

— a proposed mountain lion hunting ban, pushed by environmentalists but criticized by opponents who say the $30 million a year it would set aside for wildlife protection would divert money from more deserving programs.

— a plan to alter state justice system guidelines that critics call an attack on abortion rights.

'Nessie' is worth millions for Scotland

LONDON — The fabled Loch Ness monster is worth $42 million in annual tourist revenues to Scotland, a published report said Monday.

Half a million tourists visit the Highlands lake each year in hopes of seeing the creature, although there is no scientific proof it exists, said The Times of London.

It quoted Mackay Consultants of Inverness as saying the monster myth is also good for about 2,500 tourist-industry jobs.

"We were amazed by the results of our research, which certainly puts the monster forward as one of the main attractions of Scotland," said a director of the firm, Tony Mackay.

He said reports of monster sightings help keep up tourist interest. The latest was last month, when a visitor from Glasgow claimed to have caught a glimpse of the creature, affectionately known as "Nessie."

The legend of large creatures living in 750-foot-deep Loch Ness has been around since the sixth century.

Forecasters prepare for hurricane season

CORAL GABLES, Fla. — People caught by Hurricane Hugo last year might disagree, but forecasters here say the deadly storm may have had a positive side effect — it got the public's attention.

Hugo, which caused an unprecedented $10 billion in damage, killed 28 people in the Lesser Antilles islands and an additional 29 in South Carolina. But it would have been much more deadly if it had hit almost anywhere else, says Bob Sheets, director of the National Hurricane Center.

At the advent of the Atlantic hurricane season, which runs from June 1 to Nov. 30, Sheets and other hurricane experts are using Hugo's example to get the attention of complacent coastal residents who have never experienced such fury.

"We'll take advantage of the fact that there was a Hugo last year and raise people's awareness," said Sheets. "The consequences of not being prepared are too great."

Early warnings about Hugo last September allowed 350,000 people to evacuate safely.

Special Olympics come to a close

By RA NELL S. HOWLETT
Universe Staff Writer

Despite gloomy weather predictions, the sun shone on the 20th annual Special Olympics Summer Games last weekend on the BYU campus for more than 1,600 Utah athletes.

It was a time of medals, ribbons, laughter, tears, music, love and hugs.

Wilford Brimley, TV and screen actor, opened the games, "thanking the God who made these beautiful Rockies."

Brimley had a handshake, autograph and hug for each athlete who approached him. "I got involved today for the first time," Brimley said, "and probably will be for the rest of my life."

Merrill Osmond was a special guest and sang for the crowd of over 5,000.

The lighting of the Special Olympics torch Thursday was the culmination of the torch run by law enforcement officers throughout the state of Utah. The torch run began on the steps of the capitol building by Gov. Norm Bangerter May 10th, said Sharon Bullock, director of the Summer Games.

Six hundred officers participated in carrying the torch 1,400 miles from Salt Lake City to St. George, North to Logan and back to Provo. They handed the torch to Special Olympian runners who lighted the huge cauldron at the opening ceremonies.

Janeen Cook, 16, of Sandy was one of the Special Olympian torch bearers. She is one of three daughters of Diane and Jim Cook and has Down's Syndrome.

Mrs. Cook is enthusiastic as she talks about Special Olympics.

"It allows Janeen to be with her peers and achieve. She will be a better person because she's been involved with the Special Olympics. Every athlete is made to feel important. You don't get a loser feeling there at all," she said.

Janeen won a gold medal in the 100-meter dash, was fifth in the 200-meter dash, won a bronze in the 25-meter swim and finished fourth in the 50-meter swim.

Clinics were held for the athletes in soccer, cheerleading, tennis, football, ballroom dancing and gymnastics.

"It was phenomenal," said Marilee Scholl, public relations spokesperson for the Utah Special Olympics. "We had 1,658 athletes in 72 teams, 350 coaches and more than 2,000 volunteers including host families. We had entire wards show up to help."

The lime-green shirts of the BYUSA volunteers were everywhere. Ed Lund, 27, of St. George, a junior majoring in international relations, was part of the management team. "I just wanted to get involved. I volunteered last year. It's great to be a part of this," he said.

Provo's long arm of the law may get longer

Students may want to think twice before speeding down Provo streets if a budget proposal allowing for three new police officers is passed by the Provo City Council.

The proposed budget, written by Budget Officer Keith Haslem, would give the Provo Police Department $5,080,112 - an 8.6 percent increase over last year's amount. The extra $403,152 would be used for at least four more personnel and nine vehicles, Haslem said.

The funding needs of the police department are divided into three categories: personnel, operating and capital outlay, which includes equipment and vehicles. According to the budget proposal, personnel and operating categories would receive increased funding while the capital outlay funding would be decreased by $42,000, he said.

The $4 million budgeted for personnel costs is $300,000 more than last year's allocation, Haslem said. The additional money would be used to hire three police officers and a records secretary.

"It includes the cost of new employees and also normal pay increases," he said.

Haslem said portions of the proposed budget would also be used to buy radios, equipment for vehicles and eight handguns.

Two unmarked and three marked police cars were budgeted to cost $50,699; $16,000 would be used for two detective vehicles and two animal control vehicles would cost $23,000, he said.

The increased funding for the police department is the direct result of increased sales tax revenues, Haslem said.

"Our sales tax revenues have been increasing," he said. "In the past couple years they've been 12 to 15 percent higher, and this year they're expected to be even more."

Haslem said that because the police department has great needs, it is being budgeted a fair amount of the money.

"It's only been in the last year or two that we've come out of a really severe budget cut," he said. "The police department has had to make do the last few years. This budget proposal represents a comfortable increase for them."

Captain Paul Markling of the Provo Police Department said he was pleased with the proposed budget increase for the department.

He said the new vehicles would replace some of the older ones, so the total number of vehicles used by the department would stay about the same. The three new officers would most likely go to patrol, Markling said.

"The department's received its fair share, but we certainly need more," he said.

Provo City Council Chairman Gordon W. Bullock said he was pleased with the proposed budget and its allocations to the police department. He said he was optimistic that the economy would continue to grow, which would in turn lead to more money for city departments.

A public hearing on the proposed budget will be on June 5 at 7 p.m. The Provo City Council will adopt the final budget proposal on June 12 at its regular meeting, Haslem said.

N. Korea returns U.S. soldiers' remains

Associated Press

PANMUNJOM, Korea — The bodies of five American servicemen killed nearly 40 years ago in the Korean War were returned to their countrymen Monday in an emotional Memorial Day ceremony.

Five brown caskets and five small boxes containing buttons, dog tags, boots and pieces of uniforms were turned over to eight U.S. congressmen by Communist North Korea, the enemy in the war.

It was the first return of U.S. Korean War dead from the North since 1954. More than 8,000 Americans from the 1950-53 conflict are still unaccounted for.

U.S. Rep. Ben Nighthorse Campbell, D-Colo., peered down at one of the caskets as it was opened ceremoniously to be checked and saw a skeleton beneath a white silk cloth.

"All I could think was that one or two of these unidentified might have been one or two of my friends," said Campbell, who served 13 months in Korea in the Air Force.

The return of the remains is widely seen as a gesture by North Korea to improve relations with the United States. The two countries do not have diplomatic relations.

U.S. military officials said the remains would be flown Tuesday to Hickam Air Base in Hawaii for a hero's welcome and the painstaking process of identification, which could take several months.

Pallbearers in suits and ties, wearing white gloves and lapel pins of North Korean leader Kim Il Sung, handed the caskets over to the congressional delegation in the truce village of Panmunjom inside the Demilitarized Zone separating the two Koreas.

The caskets were draped with blue flags of the United Nations, the flag under which American forces fought in Korea. An Army chaplain read a prayer saying "we have come to take them home to family and friends, to a hero's welcome."

The American-led United Nations Command in Seoul says 33,629 U.S. soldiers were killed and 103,284 wounded in the war. More than 2 million Koreans were killed.

The Command includes the United States and 15 other nations that fought on South Korea's side after North Korean forces invaded across the 38th parallel dividing the Korean Peninsula on June 25, 1950.

The remains of the five returned Monday were unearthed in 1987 and are those of two U.S. Air Force members and three Army members. All five were believed to have been prisoners of war and died in Hwanghae Pukto province south of North Korea's capital of Pyongyang.

The U.S. Defense Department tentatively has identified two of the dead as Army 1st Lt. Jack J. Saunders, 27, of Ogden, Utah, and Army Cpl. Arthur Leo Seaton, 20, of Chester, Pa.

Cougars eliminated, end season

By MICHAEL SANCHEZ
Universe Sports Writer

The BYU baseball team played their last three games of the year at the NCAA South II Regionals in Starkville, Miss. Unfortunately for the Cougars they lost, won, and lost in the NCAA tournament and were eliminated by Illinois 5-0 on Saturday.

In the opening round on Thursday, the Cougar's opponent was Mississippi State. The Cougars could scratch only seven hits over nine innings of baseball off of Reed. Matt Norman and Corey Francom accounted for the only real punch the Cougars could muster on Thursday, as both Norman and Francom hit home runs in the first contest against Mississippi State. However, Friday's contest was a complete turnaround for the Cougars who took on Lafayette College.

The Cougars banged out ten hits, and played hard, aggressive baseball against a Lafayette team (26-17) that had 12 hits of their own. The Cougars won the game 13-3. The Cougars starting pitcher was Lance Clark (8-6), who by allowing only three earned runs, kept the Lafayette team off balance through nine innings.

Designated hitter, Brian Banks, led the Cougars with a two for five effort with four RBI's and two doubles. The Cougars Matt Norman also helped the cause by appealing Lafayette runner Ken Haas, who missed third base on his way home for an apparent Lafayette score. After Haas was called out, the momentum seemed to swing in favor of the Cougars.

The victory allowed BYU to enter Saturday's game against Illinois, a game in which the Cougars were tied with the Fighting Illini through the top of the eighth inning. Then Illinois scored three runs in the bottom of the eighth and sealed BYU's fate.

The Cougars scattered 14 hits over nine innings and left 16 runners on base.

"You're not going to win many ball games when you leave 16 men on base," Coach Gary Pullins said. "It's obvious, we just didn't execute at the right times. But the guys gave a real battle."

One of the few BYU highlights of the game came in the top of the sixth inning when Randy Wilsted sent a Bubba Smith fast ball over the right field fence. Wilsted went four for five with one RBI and two runs scored. Third baseman Matt Norman also had a productive day going three for five with two runs scored.

"I think our effort was very good all through the tournament. We're very proud of these fine young men," Pullins said. "I felt badly that we couldn't push this one through. It's kind of the story of the season: lack of execution and not getting hits to drop at the right time."

The Cougars starting pitcher, Mike Nielson, pitched seven good innings to keep the Illini in check. Nielson gave up five runs (four earned) on 10 hits and walked two. Devin Kunz, the Cougars second pitcher of the ball game, didn't have the luck needed to keep the Cougars close.

Park City hosted rugby championships over the weekend. Here a player from the Midwest team in the light jersey attempts to block a pass of a Pacific Coast team player in the dark jersey.

Rugby tournament played

By PAUL F. JONES
Universe Sports Writer

Saturday, Sunday and Monday Park City hosted the top Rugby players in the nation for the 1990 Steinlager/USA Rugby All-Star Championship Tournament.

"From this championship tournament four new athletes will be chosen to join the 45 man team that will make up the 1991 USA World Cup Team called the U.S. Eagles," said Jack Walzer, co-chairman of the event.

From this tournament, the U.S. team will then play in a Canadian tournament in a couple of months to strengthen the team for the National competition.

The Park City tournament featured eight teams, two from each region of the United States.

Of the two teams from each region there is a seniors team which is any one 18-years or older and usually are more experienced rugby players. Each region also sent a juniors team with players 25-years-old.

The four regions of the United States that were represented were; USA Rugby East, Midwest Rugby Union, Western Rugby Union and Pacific Coast Rugby Union.

In the seniors division the East went undefeated throughout the tournament while the Pacific Coast finished second.

In the juniors division, the West team will then play with the overall win as the competition seemed a little more even.

As the final game was interrupted by rain, the coordination of the All-Star athletes appeared questionable. The object seemed to change from scoring to just keeping their balance.

"The participation at the tournament and the support of the public was excellent and the sponsors are more than satisfied," Walzer said.

With words like scrum, ruck, maul and grubber, it causes an American to wonder what the similarity between American football and the sport called rugby is.

The object is the same in the two sports; it's just how they do it that make the sports different.

Rugby is actually much easier to follow for a newcomer than football mainly because it doesn't have near as many technicalities within the game. In both sports the offense moves the ball forward, and the defense stops any forward motion.

In rugby, no team will win many matches if they rely only on one facet of the game whether running, passing or kicking.

Bulls even series, tied 2-2

Associated Press

CHICAGO — Michael Jordan scored 19 of his 42 points in the fourth quarter Monday and the Chicago Bulls, who had all but blown a 19-point lead, defeated the Detroit Pistons 108-101 to even their NBA Eastern Conference best-of-7 playoff at Chicago games each.

The Bulls built a 57-38 lead early in the second half before Joe Dumars took charge for the Pistons, scoring 12 of his 24 points in the third period and cutting the margin to 71-68.

But Jordan, limited to only three points in the third period, scored 13 of Chicago's first 16 points in the first six minutes of the final quarter. And Ron Paxson, who finished with 17 points, made a 3-point basket and converted a three-point play in the closing minutes before the Bulls iced it with free throws.

The series shifts to Detroit Wednesday night, and Game 6 will be played at Chicago Friday night. If a seventh game is needed, it will be played at Detroit next Sunday.

Isiah Thomas led Detroit with 26 points and Dennis Rodman had 20.

Except for the Detroit-dominated third period, the Bulls were in charge most of the way.

There were five ties early in the first quarter, the last at 12-12 after a basket by James Edwards. Bill Cartwright hit two straight to start a 12-1 Chicago run that included three-point plays by Scottie Pippen and Jordan.

The Bulls kept up the attack and turned it into a 16-4 run as the quarter ended with Chicago on top 28-16.

Neither team was able to score in the first 2½ minutes of the second period but Vinnie Johnson broke the spell with Detroit's first field goal in 8½ minutes. The Pistons had gone without a basket since Edwards had tied it 12-12.

The Pistons were unable to get closer than 10 points in the second quarter.

Utah Board of Regents denies UVCC's football request

By PAUL JENNINGS
Universe Sports Writer

Students and administrators resigned home disappointed Friday after the Utah State Board of Regents rejected Utah Valley Community College's proposal to institute a football program.

In an 11-3 vote the board members said that a football program at UVCC is not in the best interest of the community and students.

The rationale used by the board was that the money should be used for education, not football. "I'm not against football per se, but I am against it if there are not enough books in the library," Board Member Ian Cumming said.

"Education is the glory of God, not football," he said.

UVCC Athletic Director Mike Jacobsen was disturbed with the board's reasoning. "This money can't be used for anything else," he said, referring to the more than $100,000 in the football account raised through increased student fees.

President Kerry Romesburg was not happy with the decision. "I'm very surprised and disappointed."

"It (the decision) calls into question all of the athletic programs in the state," Romesburg said. "I have a hard time understanding why our program is different than those throughout the state."

Romesburg said the fact the two Utah County regents, Paul Rogers and Aileen Clyde, voted against the program was a big factor in the defeat of the proposal. Jacobsen agreed. "The thing that killed us was our two local regents. I think the board of regents are short sighted," he said.

More than 20 UVCC students were in attendance with pennants in hand to show their support for the program, including Student Body President Deryn Young and UVCC mascot Willie the Wolverine.

In an effort to illustrate support, the students arrived with a banner signed by more than 1,000 other students who endorse the program.

"We the students of UVCC are in full support of this program," Young said.

Romesburg said he now wonders what the school will do with the money in the football account that has accumulated over the past five years. "I guess it will continue to build," he said. Jacobsen said the school will probably use that money to pursue new athletic avenues and to expand its already existing programs.

Romesburg said the students have not given up yet. "The students just told me that they are coming back with it next spring," he said.

Salt Lake Sting score early and coast to 4-1 victory

Forward George Pastor scores 2

By DALLIN L. READ
Sports Editor

"We want Sting! We want Sting!" the cry heard throughout Derks Field after the Salt Lake Sting beat the California Emperors 4-1 Friday night, raising their record to 4-3.

The Sting scored early and set the pace of the match as Sting defender Tim Tell broke into an open field and the high right post for the first goal from 40 feet out on the right side after just four minutes of play.

The next Sting score came 25 minutes later as midfielder George Pastor scored the first of his two goals as he challenged Emperor goalkeeper Chris Wilson. Pastor charged past Wilson for the easy shot. Another half goal was disallowed because of an offside penalty.

The Emperors waited just two minutes in the second half before they scored their only goal of the game — a header. Goalkeeper Paul Parkinson lost the ball in the crowd and scored, allowing the score.

"That's the breaks. It took the tenor out of us," Calloway said. He isn't comfortable with a one goal lead. Therefore he sent "everybody" forward.

Known by one, the Emperors lined up field trying to force additional goals leaving their backfield vulnerable. "We were fortunate to get a couple of goals in the first half. (Because of this) they had to push forward and were weak in the back. We took advantage," said Sting forward Derek Sanderson, who set up the Sting third goal and scored the fourth.

The third Sting goal came 28 minutes into the second half. Alone, Sanderson forced the Emperor goalie out of the box cutting off his angle. Pastor received the pass and kicked the ball into an open net. Sanderson said, "You've gotta have vision. I heard him yelling. He was right by my side."

Nine minutes later Sanderson scored on a Sting three-on-one to ice the win.

The Emperors late second half push was unsuccessful. Calloway said, "There was no messing around. It was a good performance. Today the ball bounced our way unlike last week. But we played better last week. If you can win games and not play your best, then we're happy."

Despite only one yellow card, Calloway felt there were too many cheap shots. "No. 14 (Emperor forward Richard Lopez) should have been ejected."

The Sting face the Arizona Condors Friday at Derks Field at 7 p.m.

College Bowl team aspires to No. 1

MAROLINE SEVY

BYU has hopes of being national champions in the "varsity sport of the year" in coming years, the dean of the Department of Honors and General Education said.

"We'd like to see every ward at the university participate," Harold R. Stout said. "We have every hope of winning national championships in the next few years."

BYU placed seventh in the national tournament in April. The top ten teams were: University of Chicago, Massachusetts Institute of Technology, George Washington University, University of Minnesota, Cornell University, Brigham Young University, University of Illinois, University of Pennsylvania and University of California.

The BYU team couldn't have taken more than sixth in the competition if they had won all of their games, said Dillon K. Inouye, assistant professor of educational psychology and coach of the 1989-90 team. "They played on Sunday, and we wouldn't do that," Inouye said.

The College Bowl tournament begins at the intramural level where students strive to display their superior knowledge and speed of recall of typical general education subjects," Inouye said.

"The best intramural players are chosen to represent their school in intercollegiate competition," Inouye said.

Players come in two varieties; "Some are very good in two or three topics; some are good in many topics," he said. All of them are fast, very knowledgeable and aggressive, Inouye said.

"In typical games in this 'varsity sport of the mind' a moderator asks a toss-up question that tests the cultural literacy of the participants. The first player that buzzes in gets a chance to answer the question," he said. If the player is correct, he receives points. If he is incorrect, players of the other team get a chance to answer.

"The excitement of College Bowl competition comes from the fact that players are racing to anticipate and comprehend the question, search for the answer in memory, and signal that they know the answer," Inouye said.

All of this could make a person very nervous, but not Tom Anderson, a 22-year-old senior from Santa Ana, Calif., majoring in political science, and a player on the College Bowl team.

"For some people it's very stressful, but not for me. I played when I was in high school."

"The game is definitely not for everyone," Anderson said. "There are just some people that have been blessed with a memory for the totally useless."

"You really have to have a talent for it," he said.

"We each train in a specific area, and we are expected to know it," he said. "As time goes on you do get to learn a little about other areas. It's a lot like general education: you specialize in a specific area, but you have to take other classes for general study outside your department."

Miller supports the program for this reason. "It promotes cultural literacy and general education," he said. "It involves knowledge of a traditional academic sort that constitutes cultural literacy."

Stephen Ricks, professor of Asian and Near Eastern Languages, will be the team coach next year. "The team has actually been very well run. I have no particular plans to change anything," he said.

"We do want to reach out and attract a greater interest with the students. We want as wide a number of people to try out as possible," he said.

Increased building activity forces Orem to hire planner

By HEATHER B. MARLOW
 Universe Staff Writer

Increased commercial and residential building in Orem has forced city leaders to hire another city planner to meet the city's economic growth.

To cover the expenses of processing the rising number of planning permits Orem has received, the City Council transferred $10,000 from a contingency fund on May 22.

In May development services has already received 70 building plans but has only approved 58 permits, Development Services Senior Planner Jim Wilbur said.

The backlog is a result of city philosophy to have a lean staff, Wilbur said.

The city, which has only one planner, will hire an additional planner for the summer with the funds and will be evaluating the situation to see if an additional planner is needed permanently, Wilbur said.

Ed Stout, director of Development Services, said, "I think we will need to (hire another planner) if the building keeps up." A strong residential area and a commercial and industrial center has contributed to economic development in Orem, he said.

Wilbur said that promotion of the city has paid off in economic development.

"It appears that we will be getting more construction in the next few months," Stout said.

City Manager Daryl Berlin said the problem is a good indicator of Orem's growth.

Permit applications have been increasing for the last year, Stout said. The department usually receives fewer applications in the winter but the number has remained steady this year, he said.

The volume in valuation, the estimated value of construction costs, has jumped $3.6 million in two years, Wilbur said.

In fiscal year 1988-1989, 22 commercial buildings were constructed, he said. This year 21 have already been built.

The city has not received a lot of complaints, he said. "We want to give the best professional performance possible."

Wilbur said Provo has had two plan checkers for several years.

Cancer center appoints new director

MICHAEL HAMMER
 Verse Staff Writer

BYU Cancer Research Center has named a new director.

The appointment of Byron K. Murray as the center's director was announced by Grant W. Mason, dean of the College of Physical and Mathematical Sciences, and Clayton R. Madsen, dean of the College of Biological Sciences.

Murray will include fund raising and making the center a visible entity that the community can recognize," Murray said.

The center engages in basic research and is not a comprehensive facility, since it is not involved in medical treatment, Murray said.

The center, founded in 1978, does not have one focus but is an affiliation of the Biology and Chemistry Departments. Each department pursues its own research.

"People who are affiliated with the Cancer Research Center come from a variety of departments," Mason said.

These departments are divided into four broad areas of research: medicinal chemistry, natural product chemistry, cell transformation and environmental carcinogens.

Medicinal chemists work with microbiologists to determine the effectiveness of chemicals in fighting cancer. The goal is to develop more effective anti-tumor drugs, Murray said.

In natural product chemistry, "botanists, biochemists and microbiologists are working together to glean anti-tumor agents from natural products, especially plants," Murray said.

In cell transformation, healthy cells are studied to determine why they become cancerous, he said.

The environmental carcinogens area examines the cancer-causing agents found in today's polluted environment, Murray said.

These areas will most likely be re-defined sometime in the near future, Murray said.

UD gives more than $1 million to benefit Provo City projects

MARLA MACKELPRANG

Low and moderate income families, neighborhood groups and Provo City are the possible beneficiaries of $1 million allocated to Provo by the Department of Housing and Urban Development for 1990-91.

In Madsen, redevelopment director, said the money comes from a fund from which all cities contributing 50,000 or more people are eligible for. "The money is set aside for the city," he said. "All we need to do is for it."

The allocated amount of money, donated by the department as Community Development Block Grant funds, was determined by a formula based on population, age of housing, unemployment, income and other factors, Madsen said.

The Provo City Council will allocate only $668,304 of the entitlement. The remaining $746,696 is being kept by the city to repay a loan that was used to help develop East Bay Business Center.

Proposals for funding will be accepted by the City Council until today at its regular meeting. Projects must benefit low and moderate income families or areas, create new jobs for low and moderate income people, or remove influences that cause devaluation in redevelopment areas to be eligible for funding, Madsen said.

A citizens committee has requested that 13 projects be considered for funding by the City Council. Among the proposed projects aimed at helping low and moderate income families are a revolving loan fund, which would loan money to small businesses, and funding for the Parent Education Resource Center.

The Parent Education Resource Center presented its proposal for $7,000 at the public hearing regarding the Community Development Block Grant May 22.

Kay C. Jacobson, center coordinator, said the Parent Education Resource Center is a program run by the Provo School District and Provo City that assists parents in raising their children through the lending of educational toys and books.

"We're concerned with family goals, family fun and family budgets," she said.

The center is located in the Provo City Library and is supported by community donations, state grants and a Community Development Block Grant from 1989-90. Mayor Joseph A. Jenkins said the administration is supportive of the center.

The Townhall neighborhood also presented a proposal requesting funding for such improvements as additional street lighting, landscaping improvement and sidewalk replacement.

LaNice Groesbeck, representative of the neighborhood, said economic development has been successful in the area, but more work is needed.

Jenkins said the neighborhood has done a great job in its redevelopment effort. "We agree that the program needs to be continued," he said. "It's got to be one of the best neighborhoods in the city."

The final public hearing regarding the Community Development Block Grant funds will be tonight at 7 p.m. in the Provo Council Chambers.

Memorial Day activities bring people together

By RA NELL S. HOWLETT
Universe Staff Writer

Memorial Day in Utah Valley was a study in contrasts as people commemorated or celebrated the three-day weekend.

Cemeteries in the area looked like flower gardens as people brought floral offerings to family members and friends buried there.

"It's a good day to remember those who have gone before," Laura Bown, 20, of Orem, said. "We have always come. It's a family tradition, but we come because we want to."

Bown and her brother, John, 25, of Orem, brought flowers to place on their grandparents' and uncle's graves at Timpanogos Memorial Gardens in Provo Monday.

Jack and Jean Dixon, of Provo, brought three generations with them to clean and decorate the grave site of Mr. Dixon's parents.

"It's (Memorial Day) a good time to tell the children about their ancestors — about our family," said Dixon.

"We clip the grass around the headstones, clean and sweep them, then we decorate them. We've always grown our own flowers until this year, but we live in a condominium now, so we brought potted plants," she said.

There is some thievery of flowers at the cemetery, she said. "It annoys me. We live in Utah and you don't expect this, Dixon said. I take a wire coat-hanger and make a rod, hooking one end into the pot. It at least slows them down."

Karen Dixon Merrell, of Salt Lake City, said cemeteries aren't decorated in the Eastern United States, except "maybe at Arlington."

The Merrells lost a baby who died on Christmas Day in 1965. Merrell said they wanted her buried here in the Provo Cemetery. It's an old traditional cemetery, she said.

Parks and recreation areas were filled Saturday and Sunday, but rainy skies sent most picnickers indoors Monday.

Warm weather brought out boaters and water-skiers to Utah Lake and other recreational areas Friday and Saturday, but sun-block gave way to umbrellas Monday, as boaters scrambled to dock their boats. The storm whipped up waves making the lake extremely dangerous, said Earlene Muirbrook of Provo, who had a boat on Utah Lake.

Tom Jensen, spokesperson for Bullfrog Marina at Lake Powell, said, "We've had a lot of people. Northern Utahns must have all come South. We had fantastic weather all weekend. We had a real good weekend with no serious accidents."

Despite receding shorelines, Jensen said the main channels of the lake were 300 feet deep and boats had no problems navigating.

It was warm and humid at Lagoon resort in Farmington, and attendance was busier than usual on Sunday, spokesperson, Rhonda Creamer said.

"It was pretty dead Monday, which is pretty unusual," she said. Memorial Day officially starts the summer season for the resort, which is open daily until fall.

Utah County law enforcement officers reported a quiet weekend. "It's slow — really, really quiet," said Jennifer Bramwell, dispatcher for the Utah County Highway Patrol.

According to The New Encyclopedia Britannica, Memorial Day started before the close of the Civil War when flowers were strewn on the graves of soldiers. Commander in Chief John A. Logan of the Grand Army of the Republic issued a general order that designated May 30, 1868, for the purpose of "...decorating the graves of comrades who died in defense of their country during the late rebellion."

The observance was later extended to include all U.S. war dead.

In 1971, the federal government changed the holiday to the last Monday in May, to conform to the practice of making most holidays three-day weekends.

Many communities in the United States have adapted the commemoration to pay tribute to deceased family and friends.

Utah nursing homes fail to meet standards

By NINE'L C. ELMONT
Universe Staff Writer

Utah's quality of care for the elderly is below the national average according to a performance report released last week by the federal government.

The Medicare-Medicaid Nursing Home Information guide is considered by state officials to be a valuable tool for consumers. However, many in the nursing home industry call the document unreliable and misleading to the public.

The 360-page report is the second in a planned annual series prepared by the U.S. Health Care Financing Department. The survey measures the performance in 32 categories of more than 15,000 nursing homes nationally which have Medicare or Medicaid patients.

According to the Associated Press, the report said Utah had a higher percentage of facilities that failed to meet the criteria in 20 of the 32 categories. In 10 categories, Utah doubled the national percentage of facilities that failed.

Dirk Anjewierden, president of the Utah Health Care Association and administrator of Alta Care Center, said, "The survey is not indicative of what goes on in the industry because it is only a snapshot in time."

"The only way I know to pick a nursing home suitable for a patient's needs is to visit the nursing home yourself. There should be no other substitutions for this," Anjewierden said.

"The idea is not an overall bad thing," Anjewierden said. "However, the data is generated with such serious inconsistency it makes the report very unreliable."

Dennis N. McFall, executive vice president of the association, said, "This report is outdated and inconsistent because it is based on the personal judgments of more than 3,000 surveyors."

Although Royal Simpson, manager of the facility survey section for the Utah Department of Health, agreed that the survey should not be the only information used in selecting a facility, he said it does provide important information to the public.

"The information can be a valuable tool for consumers, but in fairness to nursing homes, a person shouldn't judge a facility on the survey alone," he said. The report also said only three Utah facilities received perfect scores, meeting all criteria in the 1987-88 and 1988-89 surveys.

On the national scale, the information guide reported the most common deficiency was found in sanitary food conditions. "According to the report, among the 10,000 skilled-nursing facilities, 36 percent were judged to have failed the standard. Of the 5,000 intermediate care facilities, 39 percent did not meet sanitary food conditions."

The survey is available through the American Association of Retired Persons, the American Health Care Association, the American Association of Homes for the Aging, and in all Medicare state agencies.

King of Spain invited to BYU in 1992; Columbus quincentennial proclaimed

By PAUL JENNINGS
Universe Staff Writer

The king of Spain has been invited to BYU in 1992 for the 500th anniversary of the discovery of the New World, the director of undergraduate studies for the David M. Kennedy Center for International Studies said.

"The king of Spain likes to ski, so we're inviting him for early in the year: January or February," Ted Lyon said.

King Juan Carlos is expected to respond sometime in the next three weeks, Lyon said.

The invitation was issued by the BYU administration in conjunction with the formation of the university's Columbus Quincentennial Committee.

The committee was organized last month in an effort to organize celebration activities on campus as well as throughout the Provo/Orem community.

"We have chosen faculty whose interests lie in this area: De Lamar Jensen in the History Department and Ted Lyon in the (Department of Spanish and Portuguese Languages)," University Vice President Jim Kears said. "We want an appropriate academic celebration."

The committee hopes to get input from each department for possible activities, Lyon said. "The whole university should somehow celebrate the discovery. We're asking all departments how the discovery of America affected their discipline," he said.

"We don't just want to focus on 1492," Lyon said, "but the things that came as a result of it."

Lyon said the university will try to provide at least one activity each month of the 1992 year. "We'll have several speakers and public lectures," he said.

According to a campus memorandum released by Jensen, the entire world is involved in this celebration.

He said the United States and Soviet Union are jointly supporting the construction of a Columbus Memorial Lighthouse in Santo Domingo; and the Japanese have contracted to build an exact replica of the Santa Maria, which will follow Columbus's original route.

BYU Alumni Association gets new leaders

By KALANI CROPPER
Universe Staff Writer

Twelve new members have joined the 35-member BYU Alumni Association Board of Directors, said the BYU alumni relations managing director.

"The Alumni Association is a public relations arm of the university," Stephen L. Barrett said.

The board directs the association's activities and programs including fund raising, travel and tours, homecoming, alumni reunions, graduation banquets, regional council meetings, and the Aspen Grove Family Camp, Barrett said.

David N. Forsyth of North Caldwell, N.J., will serve as president of the Alumni Association Board of Directors for the 1990-91 academic year.

As president, Forsyth said he will host homecoming, participate in graduation activities and preside over two annual meetings of the board of directors.

Forsyth was employed by McGraw-Hill Publications Co. as vice president of research for 12 years. He is president of The Forsyth Group, which performs specialized research for magazines. He earned a bachelor's degree from BYU in journalism in 1954 and a master's and doctorate from Northwestern University.

Kenneth Thiess of Aurora, Colo., was named president-elect, Barrett said.

New members of the association's board of directors are David W. Adams of Bountiful; Lowell K. Anderson of Provo; Dorothy N. Bench of Scarsdale, N.Y.; J. Robert Driggs of Provo; Joseph H. Groberg of Idaho Falls, Idaho; John L. Hales of La Crescenta, Calif.; Philip B. Marriott of Mesa, Ariz.; and Karen D. Merrell of Salt Lake City, said Forsyth.

BYUSA President Brett Blake and BYU Student Alumni Association President Gordon E. Lowe were also named as members of the board because of the offices they hold at BYU, Barrett said.
